

Jae Yong Lee, MD

Internal Medicine and Infectious Disease Expert

Hello, I'm Dr. Jae Yong Lee. I was born and raised in South Korea, where I graduated from Seoul National University and completed my internship at Samsung Medical Center. As part of my military service, I cared for patients in a rural community health center, an experience that taught me the importance of compassion, resourcefulness, and treating every patient with dignity.

I later moved to the United States to complete my Internal Medicine residency at Danbury Hospital, affiliated with Yale School of Medicine and New York Medical College. For more than 15 years, I practiced in Boston and Palm Springs before pursuing an Infectious Disease fellowship at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio. This path was inspired by my passion for caring for people with HIV, many of whom face stigma, complex health challenges as they age, and whose struggles became even more evident during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Now, I'm excited to be back in the Desert, which has always felt like home. My philosophy is simple: I treat every patient as I would treat myself or my family. I believe in respecting each person's values and working together as partners to achieve better health.

My clinical interests include men's health, HIV and aging, and managing both acute and chronic infectious diseases. If you are looking for a physician who will listen, respect your individual needs, and partner with you in your care, I would be honored to be part of your health journey.
